Conclusions

Based on the data collected, the following conclusions have been drawn:

1. The coding and debugging competition challenged participants to apply their programming skills and problem-solving abilities.

2. The competition provided an opportunity for participants to learn from each other and improve their coding techniques.
3. The competition highlighted the importance of thorough testing and debugging in software development.
4. The competition could be used as a tool for identifying potential hires or for assessing the skills of current employees in a tech company.
5. The competition demonstrated the need for clear communication and collaboration skills, as participants had to work with others to solve problems.
6. The competition could be improved by providing more detailed feedback to participants, especially in cases where their code did not produce the expected results.
7. The competition generated interest and engagement from the tech community and could be used as a way to build a network of programmers, developers, and tech enthusiasts.
